Reagan official resigns

Buchanan to work for conservatives

WASHINGTON (AP) — Patrick Buchanan, President Reagan's combative chief of communications, added his name yesterday to a growing list of administration resignations, saying he could work for conservative causes more effectively outside the White House.

Buchanan, who announced last month that he would not run for president, has seemed frustrated in his two-year campaign to get the administration to follow a hardline conservative script.

Announcing the resignation, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Buchanan "feels he can better influence the issues and politics of 1988 and the direction of the conservative movement and Republican Party by speaking and writing from a vantage point outside the White House."

He will leave the $77,400-a-year job March 1, joining an exodus of top administration officials departing with two years left in the administration. Fitzwater said the turnover was healthy. "You get a lot of new blood in . . . It's good to get new energies in for the last drive."

Some people delayed their departure, Fitzwater said, "because they want to see Buchanan, page 4."

University, BG retract support for Springfest

by Mizell Stewart III
managing editor

Due to concerns about safety and potential liability problems, the University and the city of Bowling Green have moved to withdraw direct sponsorship of Springfest — therefore almost eliminating the possibility that the event will be scheduled this spring.

Bowling Green Mayor Bruce Bellard said the city can no longer accept the liability resulting from a large event where alcohol is served.

"We have been the main sponsor and basically accepted most of the liability," he said. "It's quite evident that Springfest has become a beer party, and we don't feel we want to be involved with a beer party in Bowling Green."

Springfest was first held in May 1985 as the result of a cooperative effort between the University and the city to hold an alternative end-of-year celebration for students.

For the first two events, the city obtained the state "F" permit necessary for the sale of alcohol and leased the intramural fields west of Doyt L. Perry Stadium from the University for one dollar. The University assisted with security, entertainment and staffing of the event.

Gregory DeCrane, assistant vice president for student affairs, said the University's decision to withdraw direct support was also made because of potential liability problems.

DeCrane

Bellard

"If you could draw a picture of a prime example of a liability situation, you would use the last two Springfests," he said.

He cited the amount of alcohol served, combined with the event's location near Mercer Road and Peregrine Pond, as sources of concern.

SEVERAL PEOPLE were injured at Springfest 1985, including one student who was hurt while jumping into Peregrine Pond. There were no reported injuries last year.

"There haven't been any claims made against the University from Springfest as of yet," DeCrane said, "but we've had situations where someone could have easily pursued a lawsuit if they wanted to."

"At one point during last year's Springfest, people started to overturn the cage where the money and beer tickets were being exchanged while the student workers were in the process of changing the beer kegs," DeCrane said.

U.S. warships near Lebanon

Carriers patrol after kidnappings

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — U.S. warships were reported within 50 miles of Lebanon yesterday and official sources in Cyprus said civilian aircraft flying near the ships were ordered by radio to veer off.

The warships of the 6th Fleet were in international waters. The sources in Cyprus, which lies 100 miles northwest of Beirut, spoke on condition of anonymity.

The United States marshaled a strong battle group in the eastern Mediterranean over the past week in response to rising tensions in the Middle East and following a spate of kidnappings of foreigners in Lebanon.

The kidnapers, and Moslem leaders in Lebanon, warned that any military action by the United States would mean death for the captives.

Pentagon sources stressed in Washington yesterday that the U.S. battle groups had received no orders to prepare for any military operation.

The sources, who demanded anonymity, said the carriers Kennedy and Nimitz and a Mediterranean Amphibious Ready Group of roughly 1,900 Marines were steaming on a "routine patrol pattern" in the southeastern Mediterranean, south of Cyprus and relatively close to Lebanon.

THE FORCE consists of about 22 warships, and 1,900 more Marines were moved out of Spain yesterday to join the battle fleet. Also yesterday, Iran's Foreign Ministry denied reports that Anglican Church hostage negotiator Terry Waite was held by Iranian Revolutionary Guards in Lebanon.

The fate of Waite, 47, remained a mystery. The 6-foot-7 emissary has not been seen since he left his hotel in Moslem west Beirut on Jan. 20, apparently for a meeting with the Shiite Moslem kidnapers of two Americans held since 1985.

Lebanon's justice minister, Nabih Berri, said in Damascus, Syria, on Monday that Waite had been "arrested" by the kidnapers. He did not elaborate.

Unconfirmed reports last week said Waite was spotted in Lebanon's Bekaa Valley, a Shiite stronghold and base for about 400 Iranian Revolutionary Guards.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, quoted a Foreign Ministry spokesman in Tehran as denying a U.S. news media report that Waite was in the hands of the Revolutionary Guards in the Bekaa.

Federal budget cuts affect city

by Caroline Langer
Friday editor

The federal government's attempt to balance its budget has unbalanced the budgets of many cities — including Bowling Green.

To help reduce the federal budget deficit, the U.S. Congress decided in September 1986 that the Federal Revenue Sharing Trust Fund would not be renewed, said Colleen Smith, assistant municipal administrator.

The federal government began distributing this fund to local communities in 1972 for use as they saw fit.

"The loss of revenue-sharing was such a disaster to local communities," she said.

The fund brought in $413,843 in 1984, $480,800 in 1985, as well as the interest earned by investing the four quarterly installments until they were needed, Smith said. The allocation was again decreased in 1986 and eliminated for fiscal year 1987.

Since the program's inception, Bowling Green City Council operated under the assumption that revenue-sharing probably would not last forever, Smith said.

"City council was very prudent in their use of revenue-sharing funds. They have not allocated the money on personnel costs — if they had, we would have had to lay people off," Smith said.

INSTEAD, CITY council budgeted the money for such uses as building the City Park and improving and building safety facilities.

Construction of the fire station

"The city provides the money for fire and ambulance protection but the money is no longer available — we can't afford to replace equipment at the same rate we have in the past."

— Colleen Smith, assistant municipal administrator.

on the corner of East Court Street and Thurston Avenue and the renovation of the police station was originally expected to be paid for with revenue-sharing funds.

"My first thought (after the fund was not renewed) was 'how will we pay off the debt on the safety buildings?'" Smith said. "We built them with borrowed money with the anticipation of paying off the loan with revenue-sharing funds."

With this source of money now gone, the city will have to dip into the capital improvements fund, which means there will be cuts in other areas — such as the rate at which police cruisers are replaced, Smith said.

"The city provides the money for fire and ambulance protection but the money is no longer available — we can't afford to replace equipment at the same rate we have in the past," Smith said. "We'll do the best we can."

With less money to go around, the city will have to pay back the loan for the work done to the safety buildings in installments spread out over 20 years rather than 10 as they originally planned, Smith said.

THE COST of interest in repaying the loan will increase, raising total loan repayments from $322,000 to $470,000. Building costs for these projects totaled $3 million, she added.

The capital improvements fund accounts for 8.3 percent of the city's income taxes. The November ballot asked for an increase in the city income tax rate by 0.5 percent to make it an even 2 percent, Smith said. The voters said no.

Mayor Bruce Bellard said residents of Bowling Green have said through their 800 votes against income tax increase that the city administration should operate within the budget and to make cuts where necessary.

"Our fundamental underlying problem is our economic base. Our income is not keeping up with our expenses," Bellard said. "The city is not going broke; it's just a matter of making choices."

And the choices the city administration may be forced to make in order to continue providing services may raise the cost of living in Bowling Green more than the cost of the proposed increase in income tax, finance director Charles Kerr said.

"Services continue to be performed and someone needs to pay for them," Kerr said. The answer may be an increase in local taxes and service charges.

Already in effect is a raise in the ambulance rates to cover the costs of operating them, Kerr said.

"WE DON'T like to do that because it impacts primarily on the elderly," he said.

The 100 percent credit for income taxes paid by those who live in Bowling Green but work in other cities may be eliminated, Kerr said. This means that a person who works in Toledo will have to pay the 1.5 percent rate in Bowling Green as well as the Toledo rate.

Reducing the amount of credit is also an option, he added.

A $5 increase in taxes on driver's licenses, raising the cost to $32, has been discussed as well, Kerr said.

Bellard said some cost reducing compromises are being made in road maintenance.

Streets are no longer being cleared before residents get up to go to work or school, Bellard said. Snow is now being removed during business hours because doing it at any other time involves paying the plow operators over-time, an expense the city can no longer afford.

The streets themselves are not getting the attention they deserve, Bellard said.

"MOST OF them were built 20 to 30 years ago and their age is showing," he said.

Ideally, the city government would replace the 70 miles of road at seven miles a year for $400,000, he said. Last year it only had $300,000 to spend on this project and this year it will spend less.

Will peace return with constitution?

In the wake of the approved ratification of the Philippines constitution. Monday, the question that remains is, will the referendum bring peace to the violence-torn country?

Unfortunately, the answer may be no. The military contains a number of Marcos supporters, who may be slow to fall in line with Aquino's leadership. And, as has been proven in so many Latin American countries, the government's ultimate power often lies in the hands of the military.

But the unofficial results, which have shown a 4-1 approval of the 109-page, 20,000 word constitution, at least indicate popular support for the Aquino government.

And this popular support may - eventually - discourage left- and right-wing extremists in the Philippines from inciting violence in the country.

But perhaps most significantly, the constitution has proven the power of democracy. Aquino knew the referendum would determine the course of her presidency, and even hinted she would step down if the constitution did not pass.

The constitution itself reduces the president's power, restores a two-chambered legislature and expands human rights guarantees.

Its passage proved the people's support of her rule in favor of Marcos', despite all the violence that has rocked the Philippines since her election 11 months ago.

With the passage of the constitution, Aquino's test now is to be firm in dealing with the rebels in the military, while not giving loyal soldiers the appearance of being a despot.

When oppression is 'good business'

by David Woide

Despite the veil of direct divestment, U.S. businesses continue to profit in South Africa through the use of franchise and license agreements, despite growing public disapproval. Businesses should invest in projects with a reasonable yield, but to invest in South Africa is to invest in the oppression of native Africans who should rightfully have a say in their own destiny.

U.S. corporate leaders seem to have short memories about slavery and discrimination. Over the years blacks, Indians, immigrants, and (more recently) Hispanics have been socially or economically oppressed in some way. Because of that, leaders should try a little harder to understand what it means to be born the "wrong" race, creed, or color.

With that in mind, examine South Africa: a nation ruled by a white minority that adheres to a policy (apartheid) which literally translates into "separate." It is this policy which Americans should find repulsive, for it simply means native Africans do not have the same rights as the white immigrant settlers.

At first glance the knee-jerk reaction is to say that since businesses are run by people, if people are made aware of apartheid, businesses will divest and apartheid will tumble. I don't believe it will happen that easily. Historically big business has tended to exploit those it can suppress.

Here in the U.S. for example, we began as colonies granted by the British government in hopes of obtaining natural resources. Once here however, settlers realized they could have it all and gained independence. A funny thing happened on the way to their manifest destiny, though. Native Americans got tired of being told to leave the land in exchange for a reserve and fought back. The Indians lost.

As I see it, business in America has for quite some time justified the means with the ends, ignoring the human aspect of their actions. People need a place to live, food to eat, and most of us want a fair chance. If business would respect that and realize that greed only creates need, perhaps the U.S. government wouldn't have to get involved in countries like Nicaragua where people chose a communist regime over a U.S.-backed puppet which helped U.S. businesses to flourish.

How does this relate to South Africa? President Pieter Botha would have us believe that divestment would only hurt the black majority it is designed to help. To that I say, how does one take something from people who have nothing. Despite the fact that South African blacks have one of the highest standards of living in Africa, they lack one thing - the freedom to be more than second class citizens. In a word, dignity.

If one looks at the Boer War as a rough equivalent to the American Revolution, the parallel becomes clear. The question now is, do we drive native people to their knees by sending them off like cattle to a reservation (in South Africa, a "homeland"), or do we practice what we preach and strive for justice and equality in the present through divestment (rather than the use of so called solutions such as the Sullivan Principles).

South African blacks look to the U.S. for support. The longer we continue to support the white minority, the greater the chance we will be scorned when the inevitable happens, and the millions of black South Africans take into their own hands a destiny that is their own.

To conclude, when the cost of capital is human life, the cost is too high. I think it's safe to say that South Africa has reached that point.

Woide is a graduate student in economics.

Music a universal healer

By Kent Miller

I am the son of an undertaker. My job is to pick up dead people.

Over Christmas break, when I worked last, we got a call at the funeral home informing us that someone had died in their home, north of town. My younger brother and I put a cot into the station wagon and started driving the seven or so miles to the house where the person was dead.

My brother beat me to the knob to turn on the car radio. We are music fanatics; we have a pretty big record collection and the stereo is probably played about five times as much as the television. In the car, we constantly flip stations in search of a better song. Lionel Richie always loses. So does Meatloaf. We don't listen to commercials unless by some freak of nature Survivor, R.E.O. Speedwagon, Alabama, the Monkees and Motley Crue are being broadcast at the same time on the five local stations.

This was one of those days. As we drove on to the house where the family was probably impatiently waiting, we kept switching stations in search of a song with some good lyrics or a good guitar solo, or at least, a good beat. All we could pick up was a Billy Ocean song on 92. My brother turned the dial up to 94.3. Madonna. It had an OK beat, but I wasn't ready to settle for a singer who probably doesn't know who Buddy Holly was. He turned the dial up to 97. A commercial was on.

Without a thought he jumped to 105.5, but it was pure static. I told him to try 95.5, an oldies station, as regrets about not installing a cassette deck in this car went through my mind. Madonna, somehow, was on the oldies station, too.

Disgusted, we decided to turn off the radio, a rare move for us. It didn't matter too much; we were almost at the house anyway.

Once inside the house, the family directed us to the body lying on a bed in the front room. Four or five close relatives were milling around the house crying, with confused looks on their faces.

The person who was dead, it turned out, had fought a long battle with cancer, and was only 45 years old. Even though the family knew this person was going to die, they were not, as none of us are, prepared for someone in their family to die.

The only family member who was doing anything but shuffling around shaking her head and saying things like, "I can't believe he's gone," was in the kitchen of the house. She was smoking cigarettes like a fiend, and listening to country gospel music on a portable tape player. It was clear the music meant a lot to her. She didn't have much to say, either. She just smoked and listened.

The music she was listening to on her tape player was the kind of music that most of us would never want to admit to listening to. It had a country beat, and a steel guitar was whining in the background. The lead singer had a southern accent, and the back-up singers sounded wimpy and insincere. Most of us have a lot of preconceived notions about the people who listen to that music. We think they are stupid and lacking in taste.

We are certain that people who listen to this kind of music are the same people who send about a thousand dollars a month to Jim and Tammy Baker, spend their weekends at the VFW, and drive 1974 Cadillacs that they repainted themselves with a spray can. I think we college students, for all our learning, are probably some of the most hypocritical people in the world.

A lot of us invest a ton of money every month on various forms of, uh, religious experiences, spend our weekends at Howard's, and drive 1974 Cadillacs that we have repainted ourselves with a spray can.

I can't say for sure, but at a time in that woman's life when things were horrible - her dead husband was being put onto a cot and taken away by two strangers - the music and lyrics of those songs appeared to be helping her keep some sense of perspective and hope. She was coping quite well in a situation while others were falling apart.

On the way back to the funeral home with the body, I'm pretty sure my brother and I were thinking the same thing. Neither of us spoke, but he smiled at me, and when I turned on the radio, we listened to whatever song was on the air. We didn't touch the dial. We both wanted to hear some music. We didn't care what it was, we just wanted to hear some music.

Letters

Yes, Virginia . . .

In response to Virginia Steele's search for an organization that cares (Letters, Jan. 28), I would like to say, "Yes, Virginia, there is such a group."

We are the Undergraduate Alumni Association. UAA says scholastics matter in many ways. We coordinate the Extern Experience program to give students exposure to the work world. We encourage excellence among faculty through the Master Teacher Award. The Outstanding High School Junior Award attracts the best students in northwest Ohio to Bowling Green. UAA actively promotes BGSU to students, alumni and the community.

And we can have fun, too. UAA is very involved in Homecoming and Parents' Day. We had our own Haunted House excursion for Halloween and we're planning even more fun events for the future.

Our next meeting is Feb. 9 at 8 p.m. at the Mileti Alumni Center. Bring a friend and make some new ones.

Terry Rood
UAA Exec. Board

. . . and yes again

This is in response to Virginia Steele's Jan. 28 letter, "Academic involvement." Ms. Steele asked, "But does there exist an organization here at BGSU for students who are proud of BGSU's learning environment?" Yes, there is such an organization - the Honors Student Association.

The Honors Student Association is a group of about 250 people who, like Ms. Steele, "enjoy learning too." H.S.A. provides its members with opportunities to expand their dimensions and broaden their horizons through alternative learning experiences. Members of H.S.A. plan and participate in discussions and broaden their horizons through alternative learning experiences. Members of H.S.A. plan and participate in discussions on controversial subjects, take excursions to international restaurants and museums and publish a monthly newsletter. Also, H.S.A. sponsors speakers who talk about issues that are political, cultural, intellectual and social in nature.

This semester alone there are 20 events scheduled. For example, H.S.A. is co-sponsoring The Color Purple on Feb. 6 and 7, taking a trip to Greenfield Village in April, planning a discussion on international relations and the probability of nuclear war, and gearing up for the annual H.S.A. Tuition Raffle that raises money for scholarships.

I encourage Ms. Steele and others like her to join H.S.A. There is no grade-point requirement. For information on H.S.A. or on becoming a member of an organization that "enjoy(s) learning too," contact the Honors Office at 372-8504 or stop by 231 Administration Building.

Madden appreciated

I would like to inform Jennifer Hughes that, in the eyes of a true football fan, John Madden happens to be the greatest football commentator in history. A true fan does not want to sit, watch and listen to a commentator state exactly what we just saw. We want to listen to someone who has that special added touch that sets him apart from the other monotone commentators. Madden adds color and humor to the game with those

"irrelevant" statements of his. Obviously you did not pay too much attention to the game. If you did you would have seen that in addition to the humor, John explained strategies of plays made, intelligent observations, and added interesting statistics about each team and its players. If you still insist that John Madden was not able to make you laugh and enjoy the game, then I suggest that next year you should turn off the volume and just watch the game. Better yet, play your drinking game - you will probably enjoy Madden a little better.

Commemoration for Bob Marley

Bob Marley, the Reggae King of the World, lived between 1945 and 1981. At the time of his death, he had become the foremost spokesperson for reggae.

His songs of protest and hope had brought joy and political understanding to millions all over the world.

A great black man and an outstanding human being, Mar-ley's music has, according to Malika Lee Whitney, author of Bob Marley: Reggae King of the World, provided "an eternal flame which lights the way out of darkness and into a brighter and renewed consciousness. As apostle, prophet, priest or poet, call him what you will, Bob Marley lives in all of us."

To continue his legacy, the Caribbean Association, in conjunction with the Black Student Union, Graduate Student Senate and the African Peoples Association, as a part of Black History Month, is having its Annual Bob Marley Tribute on Saturday Feb. 7.

The events will take place in the Northeast Commons and will begin with two reggae videos ("Bob Marley's Legend" and "The Legend Tour, tribute to Bob Marley") at 7 p.m. to be followed at 10 p.m. with music by the Riddim Doctor reggae band.

These events, which are free and open to the public, are geared for everyone's understanding and appreciation of Bob Marley, Reggae King of the World.

Chemicals haunt Wood County

by Kate Foster

Wood County may be a graveyard of hazardous chemicals, the dangers of which could haunt residents and the environmental soundness of the area, environmental experts say.

Prior to the early 1970s, more than 30 open burning waste dumps, the exact location of which are unknown, were spread across Wood County, according to Loren Shaffer, sanitation expert at the Ohio Environmental Protection Agency in Bowling Green.

That period marked a time of environmental ignorance. The term "hazardous waste" was unheard of and industrial wastes were blindly dumped into virtually any area and sometimes directly into the Maumee River, Wood County's water source, with no regard for their potential short-term or long-term effects.

As environmentalists became more aware of the hazardous wastes and their dangers in the 1970s, they established specific structural and closing procedures to ensure the safe containment of wastes.

The 1980s are a time of environmental know-how. The dangers of hazardous wastes are known and waste disposal is restricted to specified hazardous waste sites. However, two vital issues remain unknown to Wood County officials: which chemicals were put into the old dumps and how they may affect the public.

"IT'S DIFFICULT to say what actually went into the dumps. There weren't any regulations," Shaffer said. "I'm sure that there were some hazardous wastes that went into some of the dumps, and yes, they could possibly pose some problems today."

A federal Solid Waste Law went into effect in 1973 with the birth of the EPA. While the law outlines specific restrictions for future hazardous waste disposal, the solution for what to do with more than 30 years of waste blindly dumped across Wood County remains unresolved.

"The bad part about the law is that it didn't say how to close off the dumps," Shaffer explained. "Some of the townships have made attempts to close the dumps, but I can think of some dumps that have been abandoned," he said.

Shaffer said that before 1973, criteria for the location and the structure of the dumps were minimal.

"Back in the early days we had no geologist to approve the site," he said. "Their approval was a simple 'well, it looks pretty good.' They had no standards even right after the law was passed."

The Dura landfill in Toledo

Environmental ignorance resulted in open burning at 30 waste sites

News Analysis

exemplifies the potential outcome of an incorrectly structured and closed dump. Last October, Toledo officials discovered polychlorinated biphenyl-laden oils leaking from the landfill into the Ottawa River. PCBs, only one example of the wealth of life-threatening hazardous chemicals, are a highly carcinogenic chemical that causes birth defects and liver cancer.

THE SOLUTION in Wood County may seem simple: test every old dump in the county for hazardous wastes and get rid of them. However, Shaffer said there is a major financial barrier.

Shaffer, who has monitored waste disposal for the Ohio EPA since its establishment in 1973, said the EPA is not financially equipped to clean up all of the old dumps across Wood County.

"To detect what went into the dumps would be extremely expensive. It would be like hunting a needle in a haystack; you don't know what to look for," he said. "The only way you can tell what is happening in the old dumps is to put down monitoring wells, and who has the money to do that?"

Shaffer added that chances of acquiring federal aid are also slim with President Reagan's Jan. 30 veto of the clean water bill that was passed overwhelmingly by the House and Senate.

The Wood County Landfill, located six miles west of Bowling Green on Tontogany Road, has accepted solid household refuse and non-hazardous commercial waste since it opened in 1973. Robert Haas, a foreman at the landfill, said the likelihood of hazardous materials being dumped into the landfill without his knowledge is minimal.

"WE DON'T allow anything to come in that we haven't looked over first," he said. "We know who is bringing in what."

Larry Sorrells, environmental expert at the Wood County Health Department, said that no matter how many measures are taken to prevent hazardous waste disposal, in the end environmentalists are banking on the individual conscience of the person or industry dumping the wastes.

Shaffer said he is confident in today's system of waste disposal, and he emphasizes that cases of illegal dumping are few and far between. At the same time, he recognizes that today's apparent environmental soundness does not erase past environmental mistakes - mistakes that could represent a hazardous waste time bomb for Wood County residents.

Annual tribute to Bob Marley employs videos

In an effort to familiarize people with Bob Marley's music, the Caribbean Association is adding something new this year to its annual tribute to the entertainer.

The tribute will now include two videos featuring live performances of Marley, including footage from his last concert tour.

"People love him all over the world, but he is least known in the United States. We wanted to do something different this year to give people a good idea of what Bob Marley was all about," Errol Lam, faculty advisor of the Caribbean Association, said.

Lam said the main themes of Bob Marley's music were unity, peace and his love for the people of Africa.

The reggae band "Riddim Doctor" will perform after the videos. The band consists of four musicians from Toledo and two Bowling Green students - Paul Resnik and Gaylord Richardson - formerly with Crucial DBC.

The tribute will be Saturday, Feb. 7 in the Northeast Commons. The videos "Legend Tribute to Bob Marley" and "Bob Marley's Tribute" will be shown from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m., and "Riddim Doctor" will perform at 10 p.m.

The event is sponsored by the Caribbean Association, in cooperation with the Black Student Union, the Graduate Student Senate and the African People's Association.

Revenue

which help the citizens of Bowling Green will also be affected by the city's loss of revenue-sharing funds.

The Wood County Commission on Aging received a $25,000 subsidy from the revenue-sharing fund in 1985, Smith said.

In anticipation of losing the fund, that amount was reduced to $15,000 in 1986 and eliminated this year.

An attempt is being made by the National League of Cities to have the congressional decision repealed and the fund reinstated, Smith said. This is being done through continuous lobbying efforts and a letter-writing campaign.

Kerr believes the chances for having the fund renewed are "next to none - the howls and screams continue but the funds continue to shrink . . . the city is being careful to remain secure and solvent. That takes planning - trying to fill the void - and continuing to adjust."

Projected fee increase criticized as 'unthinkable'

by Linda Hoy
staff reporter

University President Paul Olscamp called the Ohio Board of Regents' projected increases in instructional fees "unthinkable" at yesterday's Faculty Senate meeting.

In a report released Monday, the Ohio Board of Regents projected a 25 percent increase for graduate student instructional fees and a 31 percent increase for undergraduate fees next year.

For fiscal year 1987-88, the report predicted University expenditures would be 4.8 percent higher than the previous year, which is a reasonable assumption, Olscamp said.

To meet these increasing expenditures, the fee increases are predicted. Olscamp said they are totally unreasonable.

The instructional fees at Ohio universities are already among the 10 highest in the nation, he said.

The state subsidy allocation recommended by the Ohio Board of Regents for the University for the fiscal year 1987-88 is 3.75 percent ($1.9 million) lower than the 1986-87 allocation.

"NO UNIVERSITY should be placed in the position of receiving less dollars in 1987-88 than in 1986-87,"

"No university should be placed in the position of receiving less dollars in 1987-88 than in 1986-87."

— Paul Olscamp, University president

Olscamp said.

Many of the gains Ohio has made in support of higher education would be eliminated if the proposed budget passed, Olscamp said.

"It is not the time for panic," he said. "This budget as it stands is not going to pass the state legislature."

Olscamp said he will lobby for a revised budget and urged Faculty Senate members to contact local representatives.

Because of the recommended subsidy decrease, budget proposals made by the Faculty Senate Budget Committee and University Budget Committee, which were approved by the Board of Trustees at its Dec. 12 meeting, will be reconsidered, Olscamp said.

Future searches which were to be conducted to fill vacant administrative positions are frozen, he said.

Approved graduate assistant stipends, graduate fee waiver scholarships and Faculty Research Committee summer grants, as well as other recommendations, may not be added to next year's budget, he said.

THE PROPOSALS will be reconsidered by the budget committees, Olscamp, and the board of trustees.

In other business, the Faculty Senate passed a motion to adopt a revised University patent policy concerning research or investigations conducted in a University laboratory or facility.

In the past, the only way a patent could be pursued was through the University. The new policy gives the inventor the choice of securing the cost of the patent himself.

Under the new policy, even if the inventor decides that the University should cover the cost of the patent, he will still receive the first $2,000 in revenues.

The policy was designed to increase the incentive to pursue patents through the University, Louis Katzner, interim vice president of the graduate college, said.

Springfest

University President Paul Olscamp said this type of event does not enhance the University's image.

"I'd rather not have the University's name associated with a beer blast," he said. "If another way was tried to give the students the right to show their spring exuberance and somebody responsible was sponsoring the event, I'd like to see that."

LAST YEAR, Springfest was held from 1 p.m. until 1 a.m. and beer was sold for a period of seven hours.

A total of 216 kegs of beer were sold, and Bellard said that was precisely the problem.

"The alcohol is what brought people there, and we don't want to have that again," he said. Bellard added that while Springfest was planned to be a social event held in a safe, controlled setting, he believed the resulting event was neither.

Buchanan

cause of the Iranian situation and didn't want to leave while there was difficulty." He was referring to the controversy over the secret sale of arms to Iran and the diversion of profits to Nicaraguan rebels.

THAT AFFAIR produced a shakeup in Reagan's National Security Council staff and cost the president his national security adviser, John Poindexter—replaced by Frank Carlucci—and a top aide on the NSC, Oliver North.

In addition, Reagan has lost his longtime spokesman, Larry Speakes and his deputy, Peter Roussel; CIA Director William Casey; political adviser Mitchell Daniels; Cabinet secretary Alfred Kingon; drug-abuse adviser Carlton Turner; and the president's doctor, T. Burton Smith.

Fitzwater also acknowledged there seems to be "kind of open speculation around town" that Richard Perle, a top administration policy-maker in arms control, is poised to resign as an assistant secretary of defense. However, he said, "I've not received any word or letters or any indication" to confirm it.

"I'd rather not have the University's name associated with a beer blast."

— Paul Olscamp, University president

"There wasn't any question that we did lose control," he said. "It turned out to be different from what we had in mind."

DeCrane said that unless a student organization assumes responsibility, the event will not be held this spring.

"The only way for there to be a spring event where alcohol is served would be for a registered student organization to assume responsibility," he said.

In this instance, DeCrane said, the sponsoring organization would be required to follow the University alcohol policy as outlined in the Student Code.

He said this would involve making Springfest a four-hour event, erecting fences separating beer drinkers from non-drinkers, and providing adequate security.

It would have to be well understood that the event would not be what people have come to know as Springfest," DeCrane said. "It's a whole different set of rules."

JEFF SLATER, Undergraduate Student Government vice president, said he doubts that Springfest will occur this year.

"Personally, I don't think it's going to go. No organization wants to take it up because of the liability—someone's got to sign up for the permit," he said.

Slater, who is also a member of the Springfest planning committee, said if a large-scale event is held this spring, it will probably not involve alcohol.

He said that Donald Regan would not resign as Reagan's chief of staff, as has been urged by members of Congress and others in the wake of the Iran-contra scandal.

Fitzwater said the departures were normal after an election and said Reagan understood the need to move on.

THERE WAS NO immediate announcement of Buchanan's successor, but Fitzwater said Buchanan, as well as Daniels, would be replaced.

Reagan, in a statement relayed by Fitzwater, said, "Pat's communications skills and his commitment to conservative political beliefs have been an important part of my administration for the last two years. I will miss his leadership and his support, but I count on his voice to remain a beacon for our political agenda."

Rumors about Buchanan's resignation had circulated for months as he created an increasingly higher profile as Reagan's chief defender in the White House.

News Digest

Funding freeze irks GOP

COLUMBUS (AP) - House Republicans said yesterday they dislike the virtual school funding freeze in Gov. Richard Celeste's new state budget but that they are not sure anything can be done about it. As hearings on the budget opened in the House Finance Committee, questions also were raised about a proposal to impose a tax on long-distance telephone calls. However, a tax official said the effects on consumers would be minuscule. Celeste's budget would finance state government for two years starting July 1. It provides no increase for education in the first year, with a 4 percent boost the second. The overcrowded prison system would get most of the state's new dollars. Rep. Thomas Johnson, R-New Concord, and other Republicans questioned Budget Director William Shkurti at length about the school situation and said they will seek to find money within the budget for a modest increase. However, Johnson said he does not see either party proposing major tax increases and conceded he does not know where else the budget might be cut.

More AIDS testing possible

ATLANTA (AP) - Federal health officials, worried by an increase in AIDS among heterosexuals, said yesterday they may recommend that AIDS blood tests be mandatory for all patients admitted to hospitals and even couples applying for marriage licenses. The test for antibodies to the AIDS virus now is required only for blood donors. The federal Centers for Disease Control has invited 250 public health officials to Atlanta for a public hearing to discuss its proposal, said Dr. Walter Dowdle, the CDC's AIDS director. Those invited to the hearing Feb. 24-25 include members of civil liberties groups, who may oppose the proposal, Dowdle said. The CDC will decide after the hearing whether to make a formal proposal about expanded testing for AIDS. Such a recommendation that state hospitals or government agencies make the tests mandatory would not be binding on them, Dowdle said.

Higher speed limits OK'd

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate voted yesterday to let states raise speed limits along sparsely settled stretches of interstate highways to 65 mph, setting up a clash with the House that could delay distribution of billions of dollars of federal transportation aid. The speed limit increase, approved 65-33, was an amendment to the $52.4 billion highway bill, which would provide assistance to road and bridge projects in the states for the next four years. A $10.8 billion package of mass transit assistance is expected to be added to the highway bill. The Senate also approved by voice vote a four-year extension of the federal fuel taxes that are accumulated in a trust fund and dispersed to states and communities for road and mass transit improvements.

Congressional pay raise passes

WASHINGTON (AP) - Congress allowed itself a $12,100 pay raise, at least temporarily, when the House let pass a midnight yesterday deadline for rejecting the hefty pay increase. Democratic leaders said the House would pass Senate-approved legislation today that gives $50 million to the homeless and also disapproves the pay raise. But House Democratic Whip Tony Coelho of California said it was unclear whether that action would, in fact, repeal the pay raise because the vote would take place after yesterday's midnight deadline. Still Coelho said, "There's still going to be a vote" later to repeal the pay raise. "Don't create the impression that we've voided all opportunity" for a repeal, he told reporters. House leaders deliberately delayed action on the pay raise by adjourning for the day in early afternoon. When Majority Leader

Thomas Foley, D-Wash., motioned for adjournment, opponents quickly called for a vote but lost 221-17. The maneuver brought a firestorm of protest to an issue that is always a nightmare for lawmakers who want a pay raise but are fearful of the political consequences of voting for one. Rep. Connie Mack, R-Fla., called the adjournment maneuver a cleverly designed smokescreen. "We've lost credibility" with the back-door move, he said. "THE HOUSE leadership acted like a thief . . . skulking away with its ill-gotten gains," added Rep. Tom Petri, R-Wis. Consumer advocate Ralph Nader said the maneuver "added treachery to their arrogant and avaricious behavior," and warned that the public outcry would force Congress to relent. In addition to elevating congressional pay to $89,500 from the current $77,400, substantial raises were in line for 3,000 high-ranking federal officials and judges. House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, acknowledged that pay increases for the federal judiciary were a stickier issue because the Constitution forbids rescission of a judge's pay raise. The Senate turned down the pay raises last week, leaving the politically sensitive issue squarely in the House's corner and raising the hackles of some representatives. Rep. William Ford, D-Mich., said the senators were trying to "look like heroes and then run for home. That's how I feel about their ungentlemanly conduct." Rep. Vic Fazio, D-Calif., said many senators are millionaires and don't need the raise, while most House members are not independently wealthy. BUT MANY House members said now is not the time for what they called "extravagant" pay raises.

Strike averted at Toledo Jeep plant

TOLEDO (AP) - The United Auto Workers union and American Motors Corp. yesterday agreed on a jobs issue and health and safety grievances minutes before a threatened strike that would have idled about 6,300 workers at the Jeep Corp. plant, the union said.

AMC is the parent company of Jeep. The agreement came after almost 24 hours of continuous negotiations at a Toledo hotel. It also extended yesterday's 10 a.m. strike deadline to 3:30 p.m. Sizemore had said earlier that the agreement would be typed and reviewed before the 3:30 deadline.

SHORTLY BEFORE 3:30, Sizemore said the strike threat had been called off. Dan Twiss, chairman of Local 12, said both sides compromised on the issues. "We're not out of the woods yet," Twiss said. "They better start working with it (the agreement)." Part of the agreement calls for three, six-member task forces, each composed of three representatives from AMC and three from the union, to continue to work out future grievances regarding health, safety and speed of the production lines,

Sizemore said. Talks also were held for five hours Friday in Ann Arbor, Mich., and eight hours Sunday in Toledo. The company and union had agreed to talks after the UAW set a strike deadline of midnight last Thursday. The union then extended the strike deadline back to 10 a.m. yesterday. Sizemore had said hourly workers would strike unless the company decided against a plan to subcontract 271 jobs at the plant beginning Monday. The jobs of 35 to 40 fleet haulers, and about 196 sub-assembly jobs in the body shop, were to have been subcontracted because other companies can do the work more efficiently and at a lower cost, Skunda said. Fleet haulers transport vehicles from the plant to auto dealers and railroad yards. AMC HAS been asking the union since last spring to reopen contract talks and reach a more competitive labor agreement.

Pfeiffer looks to capture nationals

by Al Franco
sports reporter

Mary Pfeiffer's diving accomplishments for the Bowling Green's women's swim team have been no drop in the pond.

As a freshman, Pfeiffer sent waves across the Mid-American Conference. At the MAC championships, she won the one-meter board event and placed fifth in the three-meter competition.

In her sophomore campaign, Pfeiffer said she worked hard at improving her three-meter dive. The dividend of her hard work was winning both the one-meter and three meter boards at the conference championships last year.

Because of this performance, Pfeiffer made the national qualifiers, where she placed fourth. This finish was good enough for an invitation to the nationals held at Fayetteville, Ark.

"It (the nationals) was a great experience, with all the people and all the good swimmers, and to have a teammate (Andrea Szekely) with me," Pfeiffer said. "We didn't do as well as expected, but we had fun."

This season has been an on and off year for Pfeiffer, a junior from Mokena, Ill. But BG's head swim coach Rich Draper said she's getting her act together.

"SHE'S BEEN having an up and down season, but she just came off a good meet against Michigan State," Draper said. "I believe that now she's back on track."

It's hard for Pfeiffer not to think ahead to the MAC championships, but she is preparing for one meet at a time.

In Saturday's meet against Miami University, Pfeiffer won the one-meter board but finished a disappointing third in the three-meter event. This weekend, the women's team travels to Athens to face Ohio University. Minzer noted that OU's diving team will give her some stiff competition.

As a youth, however, Pfeiffer was uncertain just what type of competition she preferred.

"I was a swimmer, then I quit that for a couple of summers," she said. "Then I dove, but I quit that for gymnastics."

At Oak Forest High School, Pfeiffer lettered in diving and gymnastics. She excelled in both sports, but after winning the state diving championship, she realized plunging into the pool was her forte.

As a result of her outstanding prep career, many college coaches came knocking at her door. Eventually, it became a tug-of-war between BG and Iowa State.

Ron Zwiernie, who was the Falcon diving coach when Pfeiffer was being recruited, won out. Zwiernie is currently an associate director at the Student Recreation Center.

BUT THERE were no losers in the battle for Pfeiffer. Ironically, Reagan Minzer, the diving coach at ISU during the recruitment of Pfeiffer, is now BG's diving coach.

"When I came to Bowling Green, my first question was 'why didn't Mary come to Iowa State?'" Minzer said. "I had a talk with her, and we got all that straightened out and now have a good relationship."

As a collegiate athlete, Pfeiffer must also plunge into the books. She is a sports management major who hopes to land a job in the recreation field.

As far as diving is concerned, Pfeiffer has set high standards for herself.

"This year, I'd like to win both boards at the MAC championships and place decent at the Nationals," she said. "Before I graduate, I'd like to be in the top 12 in nation."

The main concern for Pfeiffer right now is consistency. To achieve her goals, she must prove herself everytime she dives off the platform.

But to some observers, Pfeiffer has already more than proved her worth.

"Mary Pfeiffer is as fine a diver as I've seen since I've been here," Minzer said. "Bowling Green has not seen a better women's diver, and she is the best diver in the MAC. That's guaranteed."

Harper is all 'World'

RICHFIELD (AP) - The Cleveland Cavaliers drafted Ron Harper in the first round of the 1986 NBA draft and quickly made it clear they wanted him to replace veteran World B. Free as their high-scoring guard.

Statistically, Harper has filled the role perfectly.

Free, 33, now with Philadelphia, averaged 23.4 points a game and made 45.5 percent of his floor shots for Cleveland last year. Harper, 23, is averaging 22.2 points a game and is shooting 45 percent from the floor.

That Harper has picked up where Free left off is nothing short of amazing, says Cleveland Coach Lenny Wilkens. Free did not become a 20-point scorer until his fourth year in the NBA.

"It took World several seasons to harness his talent and develop his game to the points where he could score at such a high level while also shooting a decent percentage and getting some assists," Wilkens said.

The 6-foot-6 Harper's style on offense cannot be likened to the 6-foot-3 Free's. Free made most of his points from long-range, driving into the lane only when he hoped to add foul shots to his total.

MOST OF Harper's points come from closer to the basket, on acrobatic moves that bring to mind Chicago's Michael Jordan. While Free is a 76 percent free-throw shooter, however, Harper is at 65 percent.

"It is very hard for a player to come into the league and score 20," Wilkens said. "But the guys who have the potential to be great players, they do it. When I first saw Ron play in college (at Miami of Ohio), I put him in that class."

"So am I surprised that he has played this well? Not really. I knew Ron was going to start no matter who was on this team."

Falcon netters open at MAC indoor tourney

The Bowling Green men's tennis team opened its winter/spring season last weekend at the Mid-American Conference Indoor Invitational in Toledo.

The three-day tournament was held at Laurel Hills Tennis Club and featured UT, Ball State, Western Michigan, Eastern Michigan, Ohio, Miami, and the Falcons. Toledo Trust Company sponsored the event.

BG's top player, Mike Boysen, lost in the singles finals 6-1, 6-0 to Mike Kiewiet of WMU. Boysen's second place finish was in a field of 54. Mark Cavalier, the Falcon's number two singles player, lost to Kiewiet in the round of 16 by a score of 4-6, 6-4, 7-5.

In double's action, Boysen and teammate Mike Cansfield lost in the quarterfinals 7-5, 6-2 to Todd Hershey and Eric Nixon of BSU. The Cardinal tandem won the Indoor the past two years while also capturing the MAC Outdoor last spring. They are also one of the "Top Twenty" teams in college tennis.

The Falcon netters will travel to East Lansing, Mich., Saturday, February 21 to take on Michigan State at 9:00 a.m. BG's first home match will be a quadrangular meet with Indiana State on Friday, April 3.

The Falcons have 25 matches scheduled for the winter/spring season which concludes in May at the MAC tournament in Muncie, Ind. (home of BSU).

Crucial factors for Saturday's "Big Game"

In The Game

by Matt Winkeljohn
ass't. sports editor

Everyone loves a good rivalry, right? Well, all right, many people love a good rivalry. One must leave room for those plagued with apathy. They are entitled to their lameness.

But how serious is the upcoming hockey series between Bowling Green and Michigan State to be taken? Judging from the behavior of many it is being taken quite seriously. Spartan fans are already calling and offering $10 for tickets and rumors indicate many Falcon fans are planning to begin waiting for primo seats as early as noon Saturday for that evening's game.

Prices may go up and who knows what will happen as people clamor for admission to Friday's game in East Lansing, Mich.

Ever wonder just why or how a series could generate so much excitement? Geez, people practically lose their minds over most BG-MSU games.

Some of the reasons for the excitement:

FIRST-PLACE FACTOR: This weekend's games will weigh heavily on the battle for first place in the Central Collegiate Hockey Association. BG leads by one point - half a game. Fans love first place, coaches love first place, players love first place, athletic directors love first place and recruits love first place. Enough said.

HATE FACTOR: Whether the saints in the crowd will admit it or not, just about everyone loves to hate someone or something. The Bible might not say it's healthy, but good, clean hate (which, of course, describes the sentiments surrounding this series) feels good. It feels absolutely fantastic when the team you hate loses.

BIG-LITTLE FACTOR: MICHIGAN STATE IS BIG - ENROLLMENT 41,032 with a general sports BIG-10 MEMBERSHIP - and BG is comparatively small - enrollment 17,000 with a "mac" membership. The big guy despises the notion of losing to the little guy while the little guy revels in the thought of picking off the big guy.

EGO FACTOR: An extension of Big-Little factor. The right to brag is to be treasured. The irrepressible urge to talk about "what might have been" can be maddeningly humbling.

BAD TASTE: The Falcons

blew an eight-point lead with four weeks left last season. When the Falcons won the NCAA title in 1984, they beat MSU 2-1 in the semifinals. Plenty of players, coaches and fans remember both events with stunning clarity.

KING'S CHAIR: The Spartans have won the last two CCHA crowns and BG the three prior. MSU is the defending NCAA champ and this year's BG seniors are leftovers from BG's title year. The Greenies like the thought of a third straight league title. The Falcons do not like the idea. They do, however, like another idea. Everyone wants a spot on the throne.

MASON-YORK FACTOR: MSU coach Ron Mason coached at BG before taking over as the Spartan mentor. He won three CCHA titles here, but many older BG fans still consider him a traitor of sorts for leaving. He also has a face that is easy to dislike, kind of like Dick Dastardly. In the eyes of many MSU fans, York must look like a goody-goody. And he is the "successor" to Mason - the understudy. Not that fans don't respect the opposing coaches, but neither fan-group is about to buy the other coach flowers.

MEMORY FACTOR: These two teams have played some interesting games over the last several years. The Spartans won three of four meetings last year, once in overtime, once when they outscored BG 3-0 in the third period and once when they outscored the Falcons 6-1 in the final period. Don't forget the 2-1 BG victory in the NCAA tournament in 1984. MSU hasn't.

ALL THE ABOVE: Everything else combines to make this a great rivalry on the ice - physically and verbally. Tensions are high, hits are hard and words-exchanged are heinous. The referees hate this, the fans love it. The players and coaches are victims of habit.

All things considered, though, isn't it possible this is all overdone? From an objective point of view this appears somewhat ridiculous. After all, the primary purpose of the college experience is to gain an education, right? And this is not the Super Bowl. These guys are not playing for thousands of dollars each. Are they?

How significant an effect will this have on the future of the fans and coaches? Chances are very slim the futures of the people in attendance and on the ice this weekend will not be significantly altered.

Objectivity is an honorable concept. But a man has to be honest with himself.

Hell with the future, we're worried about this game, dammit. Let 'er rip, fellas.

Oh, and by the way - all objectivity aside - : Go Green, Go White, Go suck an egg.

The Showdown

Bowling Green and Michigan State may be bitter rivals, but the Spartans hold a decisive 18-9 edge over the Falcons.

Even in the comfy confines of the BG Ice Arena, the Falcons have only managed a meager 4-7 ledger. In East Lansing, Mich. the Falcons have posted a 4-9 mark.

The Spartans have won four in a row, including a sweep earlier this year when the Falcons lost 5-4 in overtime at home while they dropped a 5-1 decision on the road.

The last 10 regular season BG-MSU games:

1986-87	BG - 1	MSU - 5

1985-86	BG - 3	MSU - 4
1984-85	BG - 1	MSU - 3
1984-85	BG - 1	MSU - 15
1984-85	BG - 1	MSU - 3

Big Ten bigger than NCAA tourney

CHICAGO (AP) - The prestige, not to mention the money, involved in the NCAA basketball tournament is great. But most Big Ten coaches still insist winning the conference championship is most important.

"Winning the Big Ten championship is an accomplishment they can't take away from you. It's a tough thing to do," Bill Frieder said yesterday in a weekly telephone interview with conference coaches.

Frieder has guided Michigan to two successive conference championships only to have his teams bow out of the NCAA tournament in the second round each time. The Wolverines are one of the hottest teams in the conference with six straight victories after losing their first three games.

Frieder said winning the Big Ten was more important than reaching the Final Four in the NCAA "unless you were to win the national championship."

Some of the other coaches were not that sure.

"If you look at the results of the Big Ten champions in tournament play the last few years, you're going to find people who appreciate a champion," said Iowa's Tom Davis. "But you're going to find people who appreciate more who goes the furthest in tournament play and who is playing the best in March."

PURDUE'S GENE Keady called himself "a league champion guy."

"We will work like heck to win the championship and strive to improve for the NCAA tournament," he said.

Ohio State's Gary Williams said: "If you start to worry about the tournament, you won't do well in a conference like the Big Ten. You don't get to the NCAA without showing what you can do. The NCAA will take care of itself."

Wisconsin's Steve Yoder felt one thing leads to the other, and he again campaigned for a Big Ten postseason tournament prior to the NCAA but said he was in a minority on that subject.

"Every team would like to have the conference trophy for the championship which is a great accomplishment," Yoder said. "It is important to have a team playing well in the NCAA. If you win the conference championship in a league like this, you're going to be prepared for the NCAA."

One thing all of the coaches agreed upon was that the Big Ten should land six teams in the NCAA tournament as it has the past two seasons. Indiana, Iowa, Purdue and Illinois - all ranked among the top 20 in The Associated Press poll most of the season - are considered shoo-ins. Michigan and Ohio State also figure to make it.

The feeling is that if a team can accumulate 18 victories while playing in a league as tough as the Big Ten, then it deserves a berth in the 64-team NCAA field.
